THE NATION MOURNS.

The death of a member of the Royal Family—a sister of His Majesty the King—is an event of national sadness. The nation mourns the loss of the departed, and sympathetically condole with the members of the Royal Family surviving. The loss is to the nation at large, but in a particular sense to those closely affiliated by the ties of kindred. We join with the community in respectfully tendering sincere sympathy.

THE SOCIAL ELEMENT.

Honolulu society is more broken up into orders, circles and nationalities probably, than that of any other city of equal dimensions in any part of the world. Notwithstanding the petty sectionalism that often crops out inevitably, from this circumstance, it is to be noted that there exists among the better class of members of the community, a marked interest in matters affecting the welfare of others. Those favored above their fellow citizens with education and culture devote a large portion of their time and means to the improvement of the less favored. The liberal responses, reported from time to time, to calls of benevolence and philanthropic enterprise, place the Honolulu public in the front ranks of enlightened liberality. It may be that this creditable fact is due to the proximity to everyone of those classes of the population requiring instruction and improvement, so that sympathy is awakened and takes practical form in works of active benevolence. The sketch of one of the "Institutions of Honolulu" given in these columns, a few days ago, is a signal instance of the operation of this principle. Children are taken out of families whose circumstances do not admit of the youthful members being trained in the way they should go, and others, having no homes, are taken up and placed under careful training to fit them for the duties of life to which they may be called. Our city is dotted over with establishments of similar character, to an extent that excites the wonder and admiration of visitors to these shores. Among the best patrons of such institutions, the royal lady, lying in state at Iolani Palace, as these lines are being written, was one of the most active in their promotion and liberal in their support.

THE TEMPERANCE CAMPAIGN.

LAST EVENING'S MEETING.

Mr. Booth again met a crowded audience last evening. His Honor, Judge McCully presided, and "broke the ice" for the lecturer in an able resume of the history of the different liquor and opium laws of this Kingdom. The choir, as on former evenings, discoursed excellent music. A solo, "Come," was sung by Mrs. Cruzan, with violin accompaniment by Professor Yarnley. The lecturer proceeded to refute, in a bold array of forcible arguments and illustrations the following popular objections to prohibition:

(1) That it takes away men's personal rights and liberties; (2) that a man cannot be legislated into sober habits; (3) that the law would be practically inoperative; (4) that public opinion would not stand by the enforcement of the law. Referring to the two remedies proposed for the effects of strong drink, one, to take the man away from the drink, the other, to take the drink away from the man; the lecturer observed that the first had been tried by police and other legal machinery, but had proved a failure. He believed in the plan of taking the drink away from the man. Moral suasion, he considered of great value in the community, but it was not sufficient without being supplemented by legal enactment. Moral suasion, through the agency of individuals, societies and churches, is doing much to raise men up, but over against their united forces stands the saloon to pull men down, and he would have the strong arm of law brought into action for the removal of the saloon. His representation of the tragic and comic sides of the drunkard's life kept the audience alternately shivering with horror and convulsed with laughter, as he brought his word painted pictures of several life scenes, successively to view.

A number of additional names were placed on the pledge roll. The subject this evening, will be, "The Great Temptation."

A CORRECTION.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—In your yesterday's issue you report me as having said "that the accident at Kilauea Plantation is only the second of a serious nature since centrifugals were patented here." This is not correct. I did say that it was the second one of M. T. W.'s centrifugals that had burst in a similar manner, and that in the first instance, it was the fault of those who were running the machine, and not any defect in the machine itself.

GOLD IN CALIFORNIA.

GENERAL SHERMAN ADDS A CHAPTER TO THE STORY OF ITS DISCOVERY.

Washington, Dec. 16.—The Evening Critic publishes to-night the annexed story told by General Sherman of the discovery of gold in California: "Captain Sutter brought into General Mason's office several small packages samples and spread them out before us. The specimens present varied in size from fish scales and split peas up to the size of beans. General Mason asked if I knew how to test whether this stuff was gold or not. I said, 'Certainly,' and immediately tried my teeth on a lump and made an indentation, which impressed me that it was malleable. I then sent out for a hammer and an anvil, and pounded several pieces out flat. This was a crude but practical test, but when applied, acids, which verified the fact that the samples were genuine gold. I was at once sent up to the diggings and made a thorough examination of the gold discoveries which were rapidly being found in new localities and in wonderful amounts. I returned to Monterey with a quantity of specimen samples and drew up the official report to the Government, which was signed by General Mason. This report, accompanied with a quantity of samples of gold, was forwarded by a special bearer of dispatches, who was no other than Henry D. Cookes. He was sent off in a small sailing vessel with instructions to intercept the British steamer on the southern coast, and make rapid transit to Washington, regardless of expense. We had not been then advised of a ratification of the treaty with Mexico, ceding California to the United States, and were necessarily very anxious that the Government should possess information of the discovery of gold at the earliest moment."

TILDEN'S WILL.

New York, Dec. 18.—The complaint in the suit brought by George H. Tilden for a legal construction of certain claims and of the will of his uncle, Samuel J. Tilden, with a view of determining the disposition of the bulk of the estate, estimated in the instrument at $15,000,000, was served yesterday by the plaintiff's attorneys and an attorney for the principal defendants, the executors and trustees. The thirty-third, thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth clauses of the will are called in question. The first provides for the establishment of a library and free reading-room at New Lebanon, the second for a library and free reading-room at Yonkers, and the last, which is really the residuary clause of the will, creates the Tilden trust, and provides for the establishment of a library and free reading-room at the testator's Gramercy Park mansion in this city. The Court is asked to construe these clauses and say whether they are valid, and if not to compel the executors to account to the plaintiff and the other heirs-at-law for the property of the estate remaining after the special trusts created by the will have been provided for.

SEALED WITH A SLEEVE BUTTON.

The Washington Critic tells, on the authority of Chief Clerk Brown, of the State Department, this story, which, it says, has not before been printed. When the Treaty of Washington was being signed at the State Department by the representatives of Great Britain and the United States, in the little room of the present Washington City Orphan Asylum, the Marquis of Ripon, Lord Tenterden, Earl Grey and the American members of the Commission, among them Hon. E. Rockwood Hoar, were present. Lord Tenterden had signed the paper and followed this up with affixing his seal, which he wore on his watch chain. Then, turning to Mr. Hoar, the English nobleman, asked, "Have you not a seal or family crest which you will attach to this document?" "I have a sleeve button, sir, which will answer the purpose, but thus far my family has been destitute of any other insignia." There was a laugh at the expense of the Britisher, and turning back his coat sleeve the American sealed his name with his cuff button.

THE ORIGIN OF COCKED HATS.

Great breadth of brim and a profusion of feathers were fashionable characteristics of the hats in the time of Charles II., and the gradual expansion of brim led to the device of looping or tying up that portion. Hence arose various fashionable "cocked" hats, such as the "Monmouth cock," the "Brunswick cock," and ultimately, by the looping equally of three sides of the low-crowned hat, the cocked hat, which prevailed throughout the eighteenth century.

A joint stock company must be very mad when it passes a dividend and says nothing.—[N. O. Picayune.]

Russia's great need is a prohibitory liquor law, and the prohibition should begin with the Czar.—[Boston Traveler.]

It is only when the Minister has tied the knot that a matrimonial engagement may be considered a match safe.—[Lowell Courier.]

It is queer that a man who has the least character is the one who is always trying hardest to have it vindicated.—[Cambridge Chronicle.]

We must have kings, we must have nobles; nature is always providing such in every society; only let us have the real instead of the titular. In every society, some are born to rule, and some to advise. The chief is the chief all the world over, only not his cap and plume. It is only this dislike of the pretender which makes men sometimes unjust to the true and finished man.—[Emerson.]

A man entered a Little Rock bank and presented a check which read: "Pay to bearer the sum of $10." The cashier took the check, looked at it, and said: "The check is perfectly good, but you'll have to get someone to identify you." "What's the use?" the man replied; "don't you see that it says, 'pay to bearer'?" "Yes; but you must prove that you are the bearer."—[Arkansas Traveler.]

The story is one which Sir Francis learned from his father, to whom Wellington told it himself in his own characteristic language, when the elder Doyle was dining at the Apple House: "After the battle of Talavera I wanted the Spanish force to make a movement, and called upon Cuesta to take the necessary steps, but he demurred. He said, by way of answer, 'For the honor of the Spanish crown I cannot attend to the directions of the British General, unless that British General go upon his knees and entreat me to follow his advice.' Now, I wanted the thing done, while as to going upon my knees I did not care a twopenny damn, so down I plumped."—[London Times.]

Some interesting educational statistics have just been published by the French Minister of Public Instruction. The number of primary public schools in France at the present moment is 66,328, an increase of 527 compared with last year, and private schools 13,042, or an increase of 142. The number of scholars in the public primary schools is 4,503,530, and private schools 1,077,857. In 1871 the number of persons in France unable to read or write was thirty-five to forty per cent. In 1885 the number of couples who were able to sign their certificate of marriage was 88.6 percent for the men and 78.2 for the women. The average number of army recruits now able to read and write is 89.4 per cent. These and other figures supplied by official returns show that education among the masses is making great progress in France.
